Military critics are agreeably surprised by the large captures of heavy armament which Gen. Sir Douglas Haig, ...e British Commander in Chief, has announced y point out how, although the Brit-attacks have been pressed with They point out now, attnough the bish attacks have been pressed with the greatest rapidity in order to give the Germans no time to organize formidable defences, at the same time, as was evidenced by the withdrawal of the British from the Foureaux wood, where they had reached the German third line. Gen. Haig resisted the temptation to hold on to that point, which would have in-curred severe fighting, with probably heavy losses, in favor of a more methodical advance.

Evidence received from the front, as well as the official map published here, seems to prove that the German second line of defences was far less strong and elaborate than the first. Military observers believe that the obstacles are likely to be less difficult as the Entente Allies advance.
